After the Profiteers.
The following item appeared in the papers from Washington June 12th:

Charges that Chicago meat packers are unlawfully maintaining present high prices of meat by keeping huge quantities in cold storage were made in the House today by Representative Fess, Republican, Ohio, who declared that Congress should pass a "persuasive" resolution which would make the packers understand that the people no longer would tolerate such "high-handed practices."

The Ohio Representative presented figures which purported to show that the packers now have on hand 1,500,000,000 pounds of meat. This amount included, he said, 167,000,000 pounds of frozen beef, 27,000,000 pounds of curade beef, 7,000,000 pounds of frozen lamb and mutton, 138,000,000 pounds of frozen pork, 413,000,000 pounds of dry salt pork, 427,000,000 pounds of lard and 113,000,000 pounds of miscellaneous goods.

This caused the packers at once to sit-up and take notice and under date of June 17th the following was sent out from Chicago:

Mr. Consumer's larder got another jolt today; this time for the better. Swift and Co. announced that it had 20,000,000 pounds more meat for sale than for the same month last year.

And the price is considerably lower as a result, records show.

CONTRACTOR AT WORK ON DORMITORY

DIRT BROKEN TUESDAY MORNING AND EVERY DAY WILL COUNT.

FOUNDATION NOW GOING IN

Excavation Will Go Ahead While Other Work Is Being Done.

To Get $200,000.

Not a moment will be lost in getting the new dormitory at Bethel ready by Sept. 10. The foundations of concrete are already being put in, though the basement excavation will be done later as other work progresses.

Trustees Tandy, Waller and Hill, in charge of this work will see that no time is lost in getting 24 new, up-to-date newly-furnished bed-rooms ready for the first day of the fall term. The first girls signed up will be given choice of rooms.

There are 16 rooms for girls besides those for teachers in the old building and these will be put in apple-pie order by an entirely different committee composed of Trustees Blakey, Stowe and Garrett. An appropriation of $5,000 has been put at their disposal and they have a free hand, except that a part of the fund must be used for laboratory and library equipments. This committee will also have supervision of improvements in the campus, grading, etc.

$200,000 Is Assured Assured.

The Baptists of Kentucky will be asked to contribute $6,500,000 as their part of the $75,000,000 to be raised in the Southern Baptist Convention territory. Of this $1,733,333 has been apportioned to education, a third of a million more of the original apportionment. This was to provide funds for Bethel Woman's College and other smaller schools left out of the first apportionment which has been set aside.

Bethel Woman's College will get not less than $200,000 for building purposes and endowment. This is no longer in doubt.

SOLDIERS TO HAVE RALLY

Reunion of Christian County Soldiers To Be Held at the Pennyroyal Fair Grounds August 27.

Arrangements have been made with the Board of Directors of the Pennyroyal Fair Association to hold the reunion of the soldiers, both white and colored, of Hopkinsville and Christian county at the Pennyroyal Fair Grounds August 27, which will be the second day of the fair.

The white soldiers will have their reunion and entertainment at the north end of the grandstand, while the colored soldiers will be taken care of at the south end of the grandstand.

The Board of Directors of the Pennyroyal Fair Association has very generously agreed to admit every man in uniform or with any kind of identification to show that he has been in the service, free to the fair on this day. It is possible that they will be admitted free to all of the shows, however, this matter will be determined later, as Mr. William M. Hancock who is in charge of the concessions, has written to the management of the shows for this permission.

Every housekeeper in Christian county, both white and colored, who is interested in these boys will be asked to bring dinner and arrangements will be made to have this dinner served on the grounds.

Every man, woman and child in Christian county should be and is expected to be at the fair on this day and welcome these brave heroes who have returned from the war.

There will be plenty of patriotic

HIRAM BROWN DIED TUESDAY

Body Brought From Lexington Yesterday and Buried Near Crofton.

Hiram E. Brown, of this city, died at Lexington, Ky., Tuesday night, aged 36 years.

He was a son of the late Cyrus M. Brown and was born in this city. His father was a man of strong intellect and the son inherited his talents and both father and son represented Christian county in the legislature. Hiram Brown enjoyed the benefits of a liberal education and had practiced law here for more than ten years. He died at the home of his aunt, Mrs. O. J. Clark. He was taken ill at the Republican convention last month which he attended as a delegate. He was a member of the Christian church, of the Elks, being past exalted ruler of the Hopkinsville lodge, and the Masons.

The body was brought to Crofton yesterday and buried at the Brown graveyard near that place.

MISS LELIA JOHNSON IS CLAIMED AS TYPHOID VICTIM

Miss Lelia Piner Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lowe Johnson, died at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning, at the home of her parents on North Main St. Typhoid fever, from which she had been ill for several weeks, was the cause of her death. Everything within the scope of human endeavor was done to control the disease, but from the beginning it was a losing fight.

Miss Johnson, who was twenty years of age, was a life-long member of the Methodist church and an earnest worker in the Sunday school, having been in attendance every Sunday for eleven years, only missing when she was attacked with illness which caused her death.

She was one of the most popular and attractive young ladies in the city and her kind and cheerful disposition made her a favorite with all who knew her.

She is survived by her parents, two brothers, Lowe Johnson, Jr., and Lucien Johnson, and two sisters, Miss Carrie Johnson and Mrs. W. A. Cornett.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. A. R. Kasey at the Methodist church yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment was at Riverside cemetery.

Her brother, Lucien Johnson, was so ill with the same disease that he could not be apprised of his sister's death.

YOUTHFUL TRAIN WRECKERS SENT TO REFORM SCHOOL

Charged with causing the freight wreck which occurred Saturday night at Latham station, north of the city, on the L. & N. railroad, Ollie Williams and Roy Cravens, both from here, 13 years old, were tried before Judge Champlin in Juvenile Court. An open switch caused the locomotive to leave the track and several cars were overturned. The engineer and fireman escaped injury by jumping. The boys were found guilty, in fact all but admitted the crime. Each said the other did it "to see what a wreck looked like."

They were sent to the Reform School at Lexington in care of Constable T. S. Winfree.

music and speeches. We are expecting the Hon. David H. Kincheloe here on this occasion and will also invite J. C. W. Beckham and Senator A. O. Stanley and Governor Black and it is most likely that all of these distinguished gentlemen will be on hand.

Let's everybody begin to make preparations and advertise this day and see to it that it is one of the biggest events ever pulled off in Christian county.

Certainly these brave sons of Christian deserve everything possible that can be done for them. Let us all get together that they may know that they have not been forgotten. We were made sad in their going away, let us make merry upon their return.

Especially do we appeal to the farmers to come to Hopkinsville and attend the fair on this day, that they may all mingle together and rejoice that these brave boys are back with us once more.

Respectfully,
GARNER DATON, Secy.

Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Kansas, Ohio and New York has ratified the suffragist amendment.

Alvin York has been made a Colonel on the Staff of Gov. Roberts, but it will be "That's me all over, Mabel," for him to stick to his war rank as sergeant.

Congressman Good of Iowa offered an amendment Tuesday which would tie up indefinitely the establishment of a government hospital at Dawson Springs, Ky. The house adjourned without action on the Good amendment.

The Pembroke strawberry crop of twenty-seven car loads brought a total of $55,000, twice as much as received for last year's crop. There were 230 acres in cultivation and the average yield was $220 a acre. The first car shipped brought $7 a crate, and the average price for the berries was $6 a crate.

While York and his pastor were in Nashville, the "boys" showed them around considerably, giving them among other excitements a visit to a vaudeville show. Pastor Pile went home quite contrite over his fall from grace and profuse in his apologies to his brethren. "It was entirely different from what I expected," he said, "and it was no place for Brother Pile. I am very sorry I was there."

The Courier-Journal is reviving the once generally used prefix of "ex." as applied to former officers, as "ex-Governor Stanley," "ex-President Taft," etc. There is no good reason why this prefix should not be used. It is expressive, to the point and better in every way than the more ponderous style of writing it "former governor," etc. We second your motion, Mr. Bingham. Let's have the old prefix, and, by the way let's increase its requirements in Kentucky for awhile.

Miss Lorena Carroll, 19, has petitioned the surrogate's court to increase her annual allowance from $15,000 to $20,000. She says the increased cost of living makes it impossible for her to keep up her social position on the $15,000. Miss Carroll is the only daughter of Joseph D. Carroll, millionaire horseman. Her father willed her the income from $150,000 until she is 21, and then the residue of his estate, amounting to $1,250,000.

DAHLIA A FAVORITE FOR HOME GARDENS

Hard, Easy to Grow, Strikingly Ornamental, and Some Sorts as Delicate as Orchids.

There is no flower that returns more of compelling beauty and ornamental effect to the amateur for the small amount of care than the dahlia. It is easier to plant than corn, as hardy as a sunflower, and requires almost no winter care.

With its great variety of forms and coloring, its dense masses of dark green foliage and brilliant flowers standing out in sharp relief, it is a most useful plant for obtaining striking effects. The flowers range from one-half inch in diameter to the size of a huge sunflower; in color from maroon, which is almost black, to a pure white, including many combinations of tints and shades, in brilliancy rivaling the salvia, and in delicacy approaching the orchid.

The simplicity of its culture, adaptability to soils, and production of numerous flowers make the dahlia a general favorite in climates where atmospheric conditions are moderate, according to George T. Moore, director of the Missouri Botanic gardens. The plant is a perennial but tender to frost, so that it is necessary to lift the roots in the fall, store them during the winter, and plant out in the spring. The planting of entire clumps sometimes leads to failure in producing flowers, the strength of the plant being spent in foliage growth. It is therefore advisable to divide the old clumps, using but a single tuber. As this tuber should contain a part of the collar of the plant where the new buds occur, it is best to wait until bud develop before planting.

The distance apart for planting varies with the varieties, but for general purposes three or four feet are usually left between the plants. The time of planting has been a matter of dispute, but there is little doubt that early planting is not as satisfactory as late. To flower properly the wood must be young and succulent, this condition being obtained only through a continuous period of growth without a check. Early-started plants are severely checked by the heat of midsummer and either fail to flower at all, or are killed by the frost before flowering. Heavy pruning of woody plants may result in sufficient rejuvenation to produce flowers. The last of May or early June is considered the best period for planting.

Light soils are best suited for dahlias, the original home of the genus being the sandy plateau of Mexico. On very light soils manure or other humus-producing substances should be introduced to improve the moisture-holding capacity, while heavy soils should be lightened by the introduction of sand, lime, sheep manure, or bulky straw manure.

Further treatment of dahlias after planting consists of training them in one of two ways: They may be allowed to develop unrestricted, a stake being driven in each plant to support the stem; or the terminal shoots may be pinched out after three or four pairs of leaves are formed, this checking the terminal growth and producing heavy, stock stems capable of self support. This latter process naturally delays the blooming period for two weeks and removes the largest of the flowers, but by judicious disbudding the size of the other flowers may be increased sufficiently to serve all needs.

Thorough cultivation to conserve moisture is essential. A mulch of leaves, grass clippings, or well-rotted manure may be used during the summer for this purpose. Watering should only be practiced if done regularly, the ground being thoroughly soaked at intervals, depending upon the weather. Mere sprinkling of the ground is deleterious, though spraying the tops during particularly hot weather is beneficial.

After a killing frost in the fall the stems should be cut close to the ground and the tubers carefully dug, avoiding the breaking of the necks. After allowing them to dry for a day, the clumps should be restored in a cool, dry place, tops down. If the temperature is likely to rise much above 50 degrees Fahrenheit, or should the atmosphere be too dry, they should be buried in moist sand, fine coal ashes, or sawdust. Excess of moisture should be avoided.

The diseases attacking dahlias are of negligible quantity, the most serious being the powdery mildew, which, however, is readily controlled by spraying with sulphur or Bordeaux mixture.

For satisfactory use as cut flowers, the bloom should be cut early in the morning or late in the evening. The stems should be placed in deep water in a cool place. The keeping quality may be improved by removing most of the foliage and plunging the stems in hot water and then placing in cold water to which a teaspoon of salt to the gallon has been added.

The small single red, purple or yellow flower must have been known in Mexico, its native habitat, long before it was described by Francisco Hernandez in 1615. The next reference to the plant was made by Vitali Macdoni in 1657, and in 1787 it was first mentioned as a cultivated flower by De Menonville, a French botanist then in Mexico. Its introduction into Europe was accomplished in 1789 through Vincentes Cervantes, director of the Mexican Botanic garden, who sent seeds to England, and to Abbe Cavanilles, director of the royal gardens at Madrid. Cavanilles succeeded in raising plants which produced single and semi-double flowers. These he described in "Incones at Descriptiones Plantarum," (1791), naming the genus "Dahlia" after a Swedish botanist, Andreas Dahl, and the species "pinnata" because of the winged leaves. Dahlia coccinea and D. rosea were later described by him, and the seed sent to the various botanic gardens of Europe.

Gift Brought Punishment.

A young woman employed in the office of a Kobe shipping house received from her millionaire employer a sum of money as a present on New Year's day. The girl took her fat wad of notes home. She was promptly thrashed by her mother for stealing them and dragged to the office to apologize for the theft. Explanations were made, but when they got home she was admonished once more for not stating her case more clearly.—Japan Chronicle.

Destructive Civil War.

Civil war in England lasted from 1642 to 1660—eighteen years—being contemporaneous part of the time with the Thirty Years war, which divided all Germany into two opposing camps. It found the empire with a population of 16,000,000, and left it with less than 5,000,000.

Mean to the End.

Lots of trouble starts with a car, when it doesn't with a woman. The car that started the following true story belonged to a well-known man who likewise possessed wealth, a reputation for meanness, and a temper. The latter ignited when his car, sent to the local garage for repair, was not promptly returned.

He expostulated in person, and the garage proprietor took umbrage.

"Oh," he said, "you ought to be buried."

"Buried! I'm not going to be buried. I shall be cremated," snapped the fiery one.

"Just like you," retorted the other, with bitter emphasis, "doing the blinking worms out of a good feed!"

Unappreciated Deference.

"Sir," said the romantic youth, "I should like to ask your consent to my marriage with your daughter."

"Why trouble me with this sort of formality?" asked Mr. Cumrox. "It's all right enough for matters of great dignity and public concern. But I see no reason why you and Gwendolyn should come to me and say 'may I not' when you have positively made up your minds."

On the Trolley.

As the car reached Cheshire an old man with a long white beard rose feebly from a corner seat and tottered toward the door. He was, however, stopped by the conductor, who said:

"Your fare, please."

"I paid my fare."

"When? I don't remember it."

"Why, I paid when I got on the car."

"Where did you get on?"

"At New Haven."

"That won't do. When I left New Haven there was only a little boy on the car."

"Yes," answered the old man, "I know it. I was that little boy."—Cheshire Chronicle.

Baby Natural Monopolist.

There is about the baby none of the subtle deceitfulness of the old, practiced bore who deftly turns the conversation to his own exploits and affairs. Baby simply takes off the muffler from his personal self. The entire household attention turns at once to his affairs. He monopolizes the conversation with his breathless account of his hunger or of his connection with the open safety pin—and that is all there is to it.

Japanese Conjugal Etiquette.

When American people judge the degree of affection between a Japanese husband and wife by their conduct to each other they make a great mistake. It would be as bad form for a man to express approval of his wife or children as it would be for him to praise any other part of himself, and every wife takes a pride in conducting herself according to the rigid rules of etiquette, which recognize dignity and humility as the virtues that reflect greatest glory on the home of which she is mistress.

Daily Thought.

Courage begun with deliberate constancy, and continued without change, doth seldom fail.—Applias.

All Sailors Superstitious.

All sailors are superstitious, but none is so completely under this influence as the old deep-sea fisherman. He puts the deepest faith in "signs" and omens of all kinds. Nothing would induce a skipper of the old school to sail on a Friday. One intrepid unbeliever who dared to leave the docks at Grimsby, England, on a Good Friday was hooted through the lock gates by the scandalized populace. In spite of thus challenging the fates, however, he returned safely with ship and crew.

Biblical Thrift.

The Scriptures give us many lessons in thrift. Ezekiel warned the children of Israel that during the siege of Jerusalem they would have to be thrifty. He said: "Take thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentils, and millet, and fitches, and put them in one vessel, and make thee bread thereof."—Ezekiel 14: 9. The Bible shows that Ezekiel ordered the children of Israel to eat their meat by weight, and even thus only "from time to time."—Thrift Magazine.

Chinese Cooks.

It is said by those who have employed them that the Chinese always cook by rule, if they have any rule to go by—following the receipt with the same scientific exactness with which the druggists put up a prescription. Hence their results are equally satisfactory. They never burn or spoil anything, nor spill materials on the floor; consequently, nothing that goes through their hands is wasted. They cook just enough and no more.—Hotel Gazette.

The Scriptures give us many lessons in thrift. Ezekiel warned the children of Israel that during the siege of Jerusalem they would have to be thrifty. He said: "Take thou also unto thee wheat, and barley, and beans, and lentiles, and millet, and fitches, and put them in one vessel, and make thee bread thereof."—Ezekiel iv: 9. The Bible shows that Ezekiel ordered the children of Israel to eat their meat by weight, and even thus only "from time to time."—Thrift Magazine.

Chinese Cooks.

It is said by those who have employed them that the Chinese always cook by rule, if they have any rule to go by—following the receipt with the same scientific exactness with which the druggists put up a prescription. Hence their results are equally satisfactory. They never burn or spoil anything, nor spill materials on the floor; consequently, nothing that goes through their hands is wasted. They cook just enough and no more.—Hotel Gazette.

Laura Relents

By IMES MacDONALD

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Girls make me tired!" announced young Mr. Stephen Cole to no one in particular and himself in general. "If you don't make love to them they think you're slow—and if you do make love to them they think you're easy. Darn their heart-plundering souls!" And he kicked out of his clothes savagely.

A mile or so away, at exactly the same instant, Laura Lee sat before her dressing table and studied her charming person in the mirror. "Men are certainly queer," she was saying to herself. "They either make violent love to you or act as though you were going to marry them against their will." She smiled as she snuggled down into bed. "But he's a nice thing—even if he was afraid I was going to bite him." And this might have been the end of it all if it hadn't been for what happened afterward.

It must have been two months later that Cole entered a subway train one afternoon and there discovered a pretty girl who smiled and nodded to him. Cole stood before her and she moved over for him to sit beside her. They shouted at each other in friendly fashion for ten minutes before reaching her station, and it never occurred to him that this was the charming Laura whom he had met at the Hamptons' nearly two months before. For a girl looked different in street clothes with a hat pulled down over her eyes. Cole wasn't entirely ass enough to think that this young woman was flirting with him, but he did think she had mistaken him for some one else—and he was nothing loath. But when she had left the car she turned up her up for her rudeness of their last meeting, was decidedly cordial.

"Of course I know Stephen Cole," she remarked as they were being introduced. "We've met dozens of times—haven't we?" she smiled up at him.

"Yes, indeed," he smiled gravely, but his handicap was entirely impersonal and he would have left in a very few minutes had not the Hamptons protested strenuously.

"Please don't go yet," coaxed Laura Lee. "If you'll wait a little while you can walk home with me."

So Stephen Cole stayed and walked at her side along the starlit street while with all her graces and charm she conversed brightly and sought to retrieve herself in his eyes. Soon they reached her door.

"You handled yourself admirably," he said soberly, "not to let the Hamptons know how my coming spoiled your evening. I'm sorry, Miss Lee. Good night."

The red glow of her spirits suddenly died. His departure was faultlessly courteous but so decisively definite that he was gone before she could deny the thing that his words had implied.

Just why she cried that night Laura Lee herself could not have explained; but cry she did, and she moped around all the next day, half the time wavering between the telephone and her writing desk; but she neither phoned nor wrote Stephen Cole, and several days passed before she saw Mrs. Hampton again.

"And how is Stephen Cole?" she eventually asked, innocently.

"Oh, my dear—we're just so glad!" exclaimed Mrs. Hampton. "Harvey telephoned the hospital this morning. Stephen's regained consciousness and the doctor thinks his recovery is certain—but he's almost sure to be a little lame at first, poor boy."

"Hospital—consciousness—lame?" murmured Laura Lee. "Tell me," she begged with stricken eyes, "what has happened to him?"

"Why, I thought you knew! The night he was over at our house he was run down by an automobile on the way home—after he left you, it must have been—and he wasn't found till early the next morning. If it hadn't been for his wonderful physique and his fine, clean life he wouldn't have had a chance, they say."

"I'm—I'm going over to the hospital right away," said Laura Lee with tight-set lips and streaming eyes.

A few moments later Mrs. Hampton watched Laura Lee bending over Stephen Cole. The flicker of a smile shone for an instant in his heavy-lidded eyes, and Laura Lee stooped and shamelessly kissed him long and lingeringly on the mouth. With a little exclamation of indignant protest Mrs. Hampton snatched her away and pushed her from the room. "The doctor said he must have no excitement," she said accusingly in the corridor.

"I wasn't exciting him," said Laura Lee meekly. "I was only kissing him." "When a girl like you kisses a man like Stephen Cole somebody's bound to get excited," insisted Mrs. Hampton wisely.

LAND OF MANY CEREMONIES

Politeness, One Might Think, is Something Carried to Extremes by Dignitaries in Portugal.

That Portuguese politeness is most ceremonial and may proceed to an extraordinary extent is indicated in the case, say, of a visit to a high dignitary.

The caller ascends a magnificent staircase, passes through a long suite of rooms to the apartment in which the dignitary is seated. He is received with many bows and smiles.

When the visit is concluded the caller bows and prepares to depart. When he reaches the door he must, according to the invariable custom of the country, make another salutation.

He then discovers that his host is following him and that the inclination is returned by one equally profound.

When the caller arrives at the door of the second apartment the dignitary is standing on the threshold of the first, and the same ceremony is again passed between them. When the third apartment is gained the caller observes that his host is occupying the place the caller has just left in the second. The same civilities are then renewed, and these polite reciprocations are continued until the caller has traversed the whole suite of apartments.

At the balustrade the caller makes a low and, as he supposes, a final salutation. But no; when he has reached the first landing place the host is at the top of the stairs; when the caller stands on the second landing place his host has descended to the first, and upon each of these occasions their heads wag with increasing humility. Finally the journey to the foot of the stairs is accomplished.—Los Angeles Times.

Story of Fire.

We have no evidence of the time when man did not have the knowledge of producing fire. It is certain that man possessed fire as far back as Quaternary time. In the case of the earliest cavemen we find numerous hearths, ashes and cinders, bone wholly or partly calcined and fragments of pottery blackened by smoke. As far back as we can go we find man cooking his food. As to how men came by their knowledge of fire there is room for a wide difference of opinion. Its use was probably first known in some volcanic regions, where it was suggested by nature itself. Then came the two sticks, and later on the flints, by means of which men could produce the necessary agent at will.

DISQUIET SEEN AMONG SLOVAKS

Honeymoon of Revolution Passes and Disillusion Comes Upon Them.

THREE ELEMENTS IN NATION

New Government So Far Has Recognized but One of Them in Rule

Magyars and the Peasants Are Ignored.

Pressburg, Slovakia, Bohemia.—Generally speaking, the situation in Slovakia, formerly a province of Hungary, now annexed to Czechoslovakia, is not without disquieting features. The honeymoon of the revolution has passed and some of the disillusionment bound to follow the introduction of a new regime has set in. The Magyars and the Magyarized elements have not as yet been reconciled to the new regime, and the peasants have recovered from their first enthusiasm. A difficult task of reconciliation remains to be performed by the Czechs.

The population of Slovakia is made up of three elements—Slovak intelligentsia, which has always been very strong for the union with Bohemia; the Magyars and Magyarized Germans, and the peasantry. The intelligentsia has been completely satisfied by the Czechoslovak government. The administration has been handed over completely to the very small number of Slovak doctors, lawyers, authors and professors that could be mustered for service.

Magyars Ignored.

Meanwhile the Magyars and Magyarized elements have been quite ignored by the government except where the government could not find a Slovak to fill the job. Intense loyalty to the old Hungarian rule characterizes these people. They could be reconciled to new conditions were they taken into the Czech administration. But the government at present prefers to fill the vacancies left by the Slovak intelligentsia with officials from Bohemia and Moravia. This naturally angers both the Magyarized element and those Slovaks who are unfit but would like to occupy all the jobs.

A decided sentiment for real local autonomy is making itself felt. On the whole, the government may not be opposed to granting an outspoken demand for home rule in the province. The peasants do not take much interest in theoretical politics. They complain that the republic lasted only three days. By this they mean that they were allowed to plunder the Jews for only three days in the interval between the withdrawal of the Hungarians and the arrival of the Czechs.

During this time the peasants had a very free hand. There were very few towns or villages where they did not completely clean up the Jewish population, who are the shopkeepers and small traders, and at times lessors of estates. Now the peasants have no longer the Jews to plunder their interest in the new state has diminished. They were kept in a state of illiteracy by the Hungarians and therefore are by no means ripe for real self-government. However, just now they are very bitter because they claim the Czechs take their food supplies away.

Bolshevism Not Popular.

Bolshevism has not taken a great grip on the peasantry. Slovakia is largely an agricultural district and we know farmers are always the most conservative element. In the few industrial communities in the more mountainous north and east a certain amount of unrest has developed. In Kassav, far eastward, the large mills are not working and the food situation is very bad, as it is in most of the industrial districts. Here the workmen hold meetings and growl in bolshevik tone. Naturally Kassav is rather near the Hungarian border. So that bolshevism there would be natural. In the other industrial districts the workmen seem to have taken out their class-consciousness in making big demands upon their employers. Not unusual was it for workmen to come to their employers and demand that they receive a percentage of all profits accrued since the war's beginning. With all this discontent the food situation is very much involved. The mountainous, which happen to be the industrial districts are mostly very short of food and clothes. Many factories where leather and other products of the land are used function part time, but the men have not enough to keep themselves and their families in food. In some localities there are not even enough potatoes. Hence, as in some districts of Bohemia, the trend is toward bolshevism.

Generally speaking, Slovakia would not be the first province to go up in anarchic flames. For the time being the bolshevik overturn in Hungary has had indeed a rather quieting effect on Slovakia. The wealthy or well to do who were most attached to their old fatherland now do not relish the idea of returning to a Hungary which will take all their property.

Now They're Married.

San Francisco.—"I have loved your dear eyes—" ran a letter John Metzner dictated to his stenographer, Miss Rivers. "Who's it going to?" she asked. "Address it to yourself," said John. Now they are married.

GREECE WANTS U. S. CHASERS

Seeks to Purchase Speedy Boats No Longer Needed by American Navy.

Paris.—Greek naval authorities have been examining American submarine chasers which have been in the Adriatic sea with a view to their purchase. The Greek navy already had two former American battleships and experts in the service favor a further augmentation of the fleet with American craft.

A fleet of 88 chasers was sent to the Adriatic to co-operate with the cruisers Olympia and Birmingham and eight destroyers in carrying out America's role in the execution of the provisions of the armistice with Austria. The chasers are now at Malta for overhauling, but in the meantime the Greek government is making overtures for their purchase. These proposals may be entertained, as the close of the war makes it probable that there will be little further need of the chasers, which are particularly suited for navigation in shallow waters like those of the Greek archipelago.

ROUT ALIENS TO GET JOBS

Canadian Soldiers Just Returned From the Front Cause Excitement at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man.—Aliens were chased about the city and forced to kiss the Union Jack, an employment agency smashed up and several companies forced to promise that all aliens would be discharged within three days by Canadian soldiers just returned from the front. They found their jobs filled by aliens. One of the first plants visited by the soldiers was that of the Swift Canadian company at Almwood, a suburb. After a near-riot they were promised that the aliens would be discharged within three days. The guarantee was given by the manager of the plant, the mayor and General Ketchen, who were called to the scene. The men then split into detachments, visited many other establishments, enforcing similar demands. Whenever an alien was seen by the soldiers he was chased and forced to kiss the flag.

Greenville, O.—There is a new allegation in an answer to a divorce petition filed in the county court here by Ira E. Bickel. After denying all of the allegations made by his wife, which were the old stereotyped charges, Bickel comes back and says his wife refused to "raise chickens or do anything else that she ought to do as a dutiful wife."

A Knock in the Night

By GERALD ST. ETIENNE

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Go! Not another word. I will not listen to you. Stop!" Flora stood on the top step and, as she commanded in sharp, decisive tones, she pointed a finger toward the doorway.

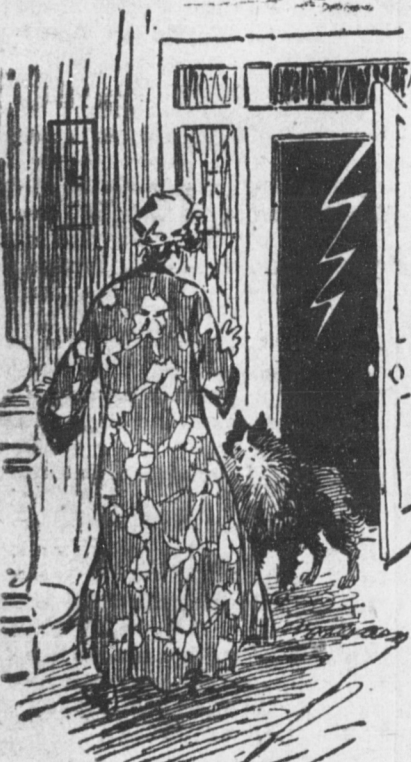

Mathew Burgess edged first on one foot and then on the other. He had never had such a scathing lecture in his life as the one Flora had just delivered him. He longed to take her in his arms and kiss away the frown on her lips, but he did not dare, for there was something behind those eyes of hers that warned him such a movement would only make matters worse. With a shrug of his shoulders that was intended for a dignified one he started in the direction her finger was pointing. Just as he reached the gate he looked back. Flora was still standing there, a dramatic figure reflected in the moonlight.

Although he was in a shadow and was not visible to her sight, yet she seemed to realize his eyes were upon her. Her chin went up in the air as she turned and went into the open door, stopping on the threshold long enough to call out: "You need not call again, Mr. Burgess. Hereafter I will not be at home to you."

Poor Mathew was squelched. If it had been any one else but Flora he would have had an impertinent answer ready, but his tongue seemed cleaved to the roof of his mouth. He did murmur something about "these women" as he unfastened his horse from the gate-post and climbed into the buggy. If Flora was going to let a little thing like his being too late to take her to the dance come between them, then it was time they broke off their engagement. As he took one last look toward her home, he noticed how dark the night had become all at once.

The moon had been doing its best all night but had disappeared behind a dark cloud. A slight breeze fanned his cheeks and he heard the leaves of the trees rustle uneasily.

From away in the distance a muffled sound of thunder reached his ears. There was going to be a storm. "Giddyap!" One light touch on the reins and Mat's horse started out on a gallop. He was going to reach home before the storm came on if it could possibly be done.

"Bonnie!" She gasped.

Flora awakened with a start. She had hardly been asleep five minutes, it seemed. "Oh!" A flash of lightning caused her to cover her head in the bed clothes, and she attempted to stuff a whole sheet in her ears to deaden the sound of the thunder that she knew would follow.

"Oh! oh!" came in quick succession from her lips. The tumult that was taking place almost deafened her, despite the sheet. It sounded as if the whole country had been struck. Flash after flash of lightning was followed by crash after crash of thunder, made more terrible by a torrent of rain and wind. It seemed hours before a calm came, but in reality it was only a very few minutes. The stillness was almost as terrifying as the storm.

Flora longed to cry out for help, but there was no one within hearing distance. Her father was the only other person in the house, and his room was at the rear. He was deaf and could sleep through any kind of storm. Suddenly a sound broke the stillness. Flora's trembling stopped immediately. She listened. The sound was repeated. Some one was knocking at the big brass knocker on the front door. Who was it at that hour? Flora asked herself.

A telegram from her mother, was the answer that presented itself. Flora jumped from the bed and slipped into slippers and a kimono. Her heart beat rapidly as she stood with her hand on the lock of the big oak door. She was terrified, not of personal danger but at the thought of what news might be waiting on the outside of that door for her. Telegrams in the night are always horrible things.

No sooner had she opened the door than she jumped back with a scream that rang through the house. A big burly body had flung itself at her and her hands had come in contact with wet, sticky fur. Her head reeled and she was almost fainting when some thing told her what it was.

"Bonnie!" she gasped. "Bonnie, where did you come from?" An answering whine caused her to sink down with a cry of thankfulness. When she flashed on the lights there stood Bonnie, Mat Burgess' collie. It was quite some time before Flora could become composed enough to pat the dog. He was shaking all over.

Mat was with him, was her thought as she threw open the door. But no Mat was there. It was almost dawn and the storm had cleared. The dog sank back at the sight of the wet landscape. Who could have knocked? One look at Bonnie answered the question. He had reached up with his nose and lifted the knocker.

He seemed to be pleading for something. Mat had been hurt and the dog had come for help. She had read of such things in stories. With this thought came conviction.

"Where is he, old fellow, and how was he hurt?" Flora asked, frantically.

The dog wagged its tail as if it understood, and that convinced Flora the more. A tree had fallen on Mat on his way home, or he had been struck by lightning. Mat in that storm! The thought was terrible. Oh, what could she do? Madly she raced upstairs and dressed hurriedly. It was daylight by the time she was down again.

Poor Mat had been plinned down by that tree all night! Oh, what if he was dead? Bonnie would lead her to him—but Bonnie wouldn't. Nothing would coax that dog to leave the house. This was odd—for every dog she had read of that had gone in search of help had always led the rescuer to the scene of the accident. Perhaps—but the sound of the telephone bell broke her thoughts and she hurried to answer it. Some one had found Mat, was her first thought as she lifted the receiver.

"Hello!" she managed, timidly.

"Hello," came excitedly from the other end of the line. "Have you seen anything of Bonnie?" Flora nearly dropped the receiver with joy. It was Mathew.

"Yes; the old darling is here," she cried. "Oh, Mat, I thought you were hurt or dead! Bonnie rapped at the door, and he's shaking as if something awful had happened."

"I went away without him," Mat answered in a tone of relief, "and he's terrified of storm. It is characteristic of collies, you know."

"Come right over and get him. I'm frightened of everything." The strain was beginning to tell on Flora and she burst into tears.

"I will be right over," she heard Mat say as the receiver went up.

Flora sank down on the rug beside Bonnie and wept softly. Suddenly it dawned upon her that she had broken off her engagement with Mat and called him Mr. Burgess, to say nothing of ordering him from the house. She had been silly and disturbed over nothing.

"What will I do, Bonnie?" she asked in bewilderment.

The old dog looked up into her face with his big, kind, expressive eyes. Flora thought, as if to say, "Why, he's the best master in the world! Kiss him and make up, of course. What else would you do?"

"That's just what I will do," she exclaimed eagerly as she put her arms around Bonnie's neck and hugged him for the suggestion.

CONSCIENCE WILL BE THERE

Dishonest Man May Dodge the Law but Other Forms of Punishment Await Him.

You may be one of those who have accumulated a little money, but not enough to insure you the life of ease which you have planned for your later years.

Perhaps you have made your money by economy and small and honest investments.

You compare your condition with that of some other men who have much more than you possess, but who have the reputation of being unscrupulous in business deals.

You feel that although it is known they are not strictly honest, they are accepted by society because of what they are in a financial way.

You are considering whether a course such as they have pursued would not be better than the one you are following.

Stop this line of thought. You are considering a dangerous course.

The more you think about it the more likely you are to become influenced by false gods.

Don't forget that while you may dodge the law you can't give your conscience the slip.—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

Life in Guatemala.

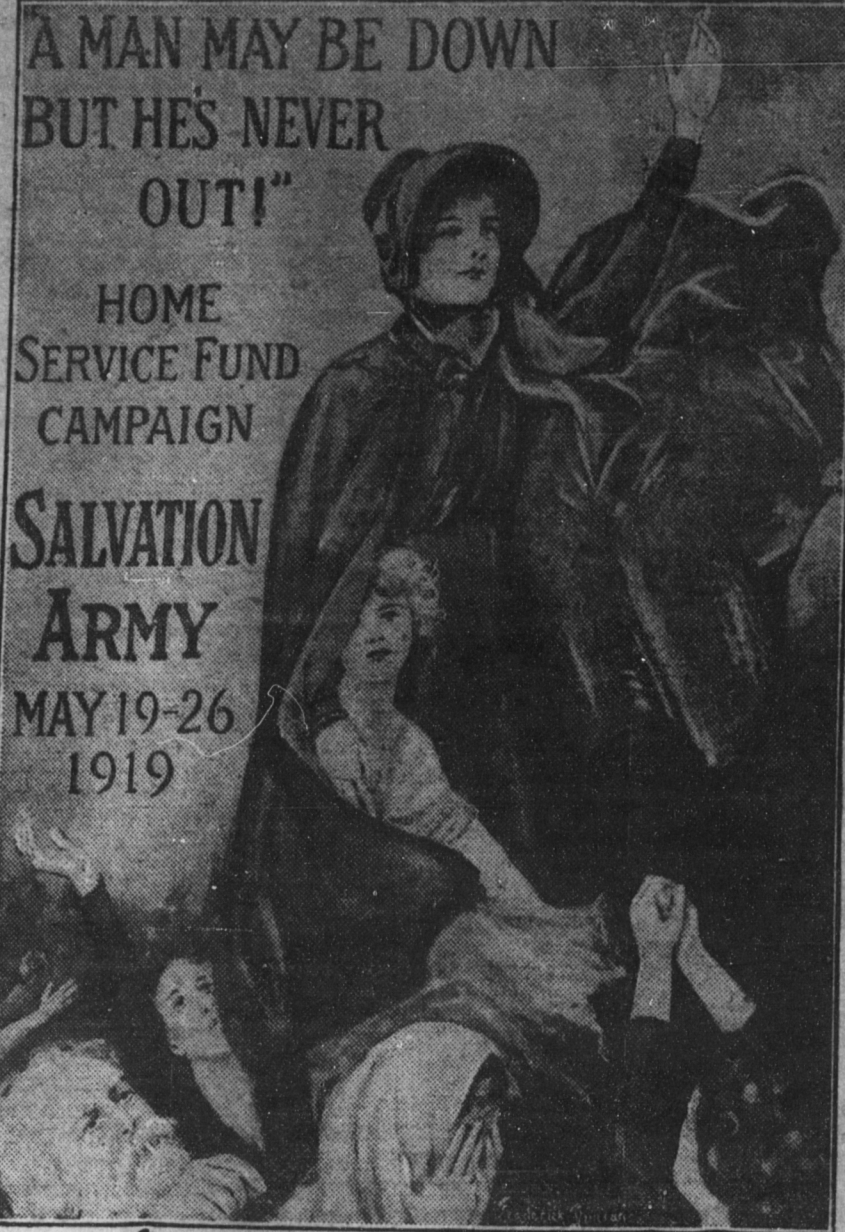

Guatemala is a frequent sufferer by earthquakes. The city of Guatemala itself, the present capital, was chosen after Guatemala Antigua, the original capital, was destroyed by a combined earthquake and water burst, either from clouds or the mountain. The new capital stands on an isolated hill, which it was thought would be a site least likely to be shaken. But the whole country bears evidence of what earthquakes have done to it. It is not a rare object to see a high mountain with half of it blown right off. In various communities they tell of having to clear streets of dust that falls to a depth of several feet after a volcanic explosion.

THE $13,000,000 SALVATION ARMY POSTER

A MAN MAY BE DOWN BUT HE'S NEVER OUT!

HOME SERVICE FUND CAMPAIGN

SALVATION ARMY MAY 19-26 1919

"A man may be down, but he's never out," the Salvation Army slogan, furnished the theme for the official Home Service Fund Campaign poster designed by Frederick Duncan, the noted artist. From this he has evolved a striking artistic creation, typifying the hand of the Salvation Army reaching out to rescue those who are enshrouded in the clouds of poverty and vice. A Salvation Army lass is the principal figure, and the scarlet lining of her cloak, thrown back as she enfolds those who are calling out to her in distress, furnishes the poster with its one spot of brilliant color. The background is of blacks, grays and greens, indicative of the storm clouds of misery and want.

GETS ONE YEAR

Henry Shanklin indicted for robbing S. Y. Trimble's safe of stocks and bonds valued at $17,000, most of which was recovered, was tried yesterday afternoon and on a plea of guilty was given one year, the minimum sentence.

At the 219th annual commencement of Yale College, 598 degrees to graduates were awarded.

On June 26, 590 Kentucky soldiers will arrive at Newport News and be sent to Camp Taylor.

Tuesday the maximum temperature for the day was 97 degrees, exactly the same that it was for Monday.

Length of Lobsters.

Whatever may be the excellent intent of the bill filed in the Massachusetts legislature reducing the length of lobsters that may be legally taken from 9 to 8 inches, the measure might well be entitled a bill to further the extermination of the lobster. The lobster is rapidly disappearing, partly, at any rate, because young and immature specimens are permitted by law to be caught. The present 9 inches in this state, is shorter than the Maine law allows—and that is none too long.—Boston Post.

Discipline.

Know you not that our business here is a warfare, and one must watch, and one go out as a spy, and one must fight? You neglect to do the bidding of the commander, and complain when he hath laid somewhat rougher than common up you, and you mark not what, so far as in you lies, you are making the army to become, so that if all copy you, none will dig a trench, none will cast up a rampart, none will watch, none will run any risk, but each will appear worthless for warfare.—Epictetus.

Cyclones and Tornadoes.

The so-called "cyclones" of the West are "tornadoes," which are whirling storms of great violence, but contracted in area. Tornadoes have been known whose greatest width did not exceed a few rods, and those which exceed several miles in width are very unusual. The ordinary storm, where the wind attains a velocity of 40 to 60 miles an hour, has nothing in common with either a cyclone or tornado. It is a straight rush of air and does not whirl at all.

Possibly Hadn't Been Introduced.

Arthur owned a bulldog that he had been teaching to hunt rats, and whenever he called out the word to him he would run frantically to various places to scratch. A neighboring woman was so amused at the performance that she wanted to show the dog's tricks to her son, but to her repeated call of "rats" the dog only stood and looked at her. "Oh," said Arthur coming up at this point, "he doesn't know your rats."

Cruelty to Actors.

"Your only applause," quoth a star of the movies, "is the click of the camera." Obviously, an instance of cruelty to actors. Invention should come to the rescue and equip every movie studio with an applause machine, consisting of a pair of cast-iron hands and an endless string of perspiration caps.—Film Fun.

Protection From Live Wires.

For the sure protection of linemen handling live wires, a pair of gloves inside and one outside of the rubber gloves have been recommended. The woven fabric inside glove takes up perspiration and shields the rubber from the finger nails and a leather gauntlet over the rubber glove protects from outside mechanical injury, aids in grasping tools and keeps the hands warm in winter.

His Preference.

Alvine had always longed for a dog. One day the nurse announced that if he would pray for it, God might send him a brother or a sister very soon. That night the nurse overheard him saying his prayers. He ended with: "Dear God, I would like a brother or a sister, but if it's just the same to you, I'd lots rather have a dog."

Would Return It.

It was a very hot day and the kind-hearted iceman had given a little girl a piece of ice. A newsboy asked her for it, but she refused to give it to him. "Aw shucks!" said the boy. "I'll give it back to you—I only want the juice out of it."—Boston Transcript.

The Proof.

Patriotic Air Roused Her.

A Quincy girl returned from a dance recently at about 3 a. m. and could not be awakened for work. The alarm clock had no effect, nor did repeated calls from members of the family. Her little brother tooted the reveille, but the girl was no soldier. Finally "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played, and to that the patriotic girl immediately responded.—Boston Globe.

A Knock in the Night

By GERALD ST. ETIENNE

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Go! Not another word. I will not listen to you. Stop!" Flora stood on the top step and, as she commanded in sharp, decisive tones, she pointed a finger toward the pathway.

Mathew Burgess edged first on one foot and then on the other. He had never had such a scathing lecture in his life as the one Flora had just delivered him. He longed to take her in his arms and kiss away the frown on her lips, but he did not dare, for there was something behind those eyes of hers that warned him such a movement would only make matters worse. With a shrug of his shoulders that was intended for a dignified one he started in the direction her finger was pointing. Just as he reached the gate he looked back. Flora was still standing there, a dramatic figure reflected in the moonlight.

Although he was in a shadow and was not visible to her sight, yet she seemed to realize his eyes were upon her. Her chin went up in the air as she turned and went into the open door, stopping on the threshold long enough to call out: "You need not call again, Mr. Burgess. Hereafter I will not be at home to you."

Poor Mathew was squelched. If it had been any one else but Flora he would have had an impertinent answer ready, but his tongue seemed cleaved to the roof of his mouth. He did murmur something about "these women" as he unfastened his horse from the gate-post and climbed into the buggy. If Flora was going to let a little thing like his being too late to take her to the dance come between them, then it was time they broke off their engagement. As he took one last look toward her house, he noticed how dark the night had become all at once.

The moon had been doing its best all night but had disappeared behind a dark cloud. A slight breeze fanned his cheeks and he heard the leaves of the trees rustle uneasily.

From away in the distance a muffled sound of thunder reached his ears. There was going to be a storm. "Giddyap!" One light touch on the reins and Mat's horse started out on a gallop. He was going to reach home before the storm came on if it could possibly be done.

"Bonnie!" She gasped.

Flora awakened with a start. She had hardly been asleep five minutes it seemed. "Oh!" A flash of snake lightning caused her to cover her head in the bed clothes, and she attempted to stuff a whole sheet in her ears to deaden the sound of the thunder that she knew would follow.

"Oh! oh!" came in quick succession from her lips. The tumult that was taking place almost deafened her, despite the sheet. It sounded as if the whole country had been struck. Flash after flash of lightning was followed by crash after crash of thunder, made more terrible by a torrent of rain and wind. It seemed hours before a calm came, but in reality it was only a very few minutes. The stillness was almost as terrifying as the storm.

Flora longed to cry out for help, but there was no one within hearing distance. Her father was the only other person in the house, and his room was at the rear. He was deaf and could sleep through any kind of storm. Suddenly a sound broke the stillness. Flora's trembling stopped immediately. She listened. The sound was repeated. Some one was knocking the big brass knocker on the front door. Who was it at that hour? Flora asked herself.

A telegram from her mother, was the answer that presented itself. Flora jumped from the bed and slipped into slippers and a kimono.

Her heart beat rapidly as she stood with her hand on the lock of the big oak door. She was terrified, not of personal danger but at the thought of what news might be waiting on the outside of that door for her. Telegrams in the night are always horrible things.

No sooner had she opened the door than she jumped back with a scream that rang through the house. A big burly body had flung itself at her and her hands had come in contact with wet, sticky fur. Her head reeled and she was almost fainting when some thing told her what it was.

"Bonnie!" she gasped. "Bonnie, where did you come from?"

An answering whine caused her to sink down with a cry of thankfulness. When she flashed on the lights there stood Bonnie, Mat Burgess' collie. It was quite some time before Flora could become composed enough to pat the dog. He was shaking all over.

Mat was with him, was her thought as she threw open the door. But no Mat was there. It was almost dawn and the storm had cleared. The dog sank back at the sight of the wet landscape. Who could have knocked? One look at Bonnie answered the question. He had reached up with his nose and lifted the knocker.

He seemed to be pleading for something. Mat had been hurt and the dog had come for help. She had read of such things in stories. With this thought came conviction.

"Where is he, old fellow, and how was he hurt?" Flora asked, frantically.

The dog wagged its tail as if it understood, and that convinced Flora the more. A tree had fallen on Mat on his way home, or he had been struck by lightning. Mat in that storm! The thought was terrible. Oh, what could she do? Madly she raced upstairs and dressed hurriedly. It was daylight by the time she was down again.

Poor Mat had been pinned down by that tree all night! Oh, what if he was dead? Bonnie would lead her to him—but Bonnie wouldn't. Nothing would coax that dog to leave the house. This was odd—for every dog she had read of that had gone in search of help had always led the rescuer to the scene of the accident. Perhaps—but the sound of the telephone bell broke her thoughts and she hurried to answer it. Some one had found Mat, was her first thought as she lifted the receiver.

"Hello!" she managed, timidly.

"Hello," came excitedly from the other end of the line. "Have you seen anything of Bonnie?" Flora nearly dropped the receiver with joy. It was Mathew.

"Yes; the old darling is here," she cried. "Oh, Mat, I thought you were hurt or dead! Bonnie rapped at the door, and he's shaking as if something awful had happened."

"I went away without him," Mat answered in a tone of relief, "and he's terrified of storm. It is characteristic of collies, you know."

"Come right over and get him. I'm frightened of everything." The strain was beginning to tell on Flora and she burst into tears.

"I will be right over," she heard Mat say as the receiver went up.

Flora sank down on the rug beside Bonnie and wept softly. Suddenly it dawned upon her that she had broken off her engagement with Mat and called him Mr. Burgess, to say nothing of ordering him from the house. She had been silly and disturbed over nothing.

"What will I do, Bonnie?" she asked in bewilderment.

The old dog looked up into her face with his big, kind, expressive eyes. Flora thought, as if to say, "Why, he's the best master in the world! Kiss him and make up, of course. What else would you do?"

"That's just what I will do," she exclaimed eagerly as she put her arms around Bonnie's neck and hugged him for the suggestion.

CONSCIENCE WILL BE THERE

Dishonest Man May Dodge the Law but Other Forms of Punishment Await Him.

You may be one of those who have accumulated a little money, but not enough to insure you the life of ease which you have planned for your later years.

Perhaps you have made your money by economy and small and honest investments.

You compare your condition with that of some other men who have much more than you possess, but who have the reputation of being unscrupulous in business deals.

You feel that although it is known they are not strictly honest, they are accepted by society because of what they are in a financial way.

You are considering whether a course such as they have pursued would not be better than the one you are following.

Stop this line of thought. You are considering a dangerous course.

The more you think about it the more likely you are to become influenced by false gods.

Don't forget that while you may dodge the law you can't give your conscience the slip.—Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.

Life in Guatemala.

Guatemala is a frequent sufferer by earthquakes. The city of Guatemala itself, the present capital, was chosen after Guatemala Antigua, the original capital, was destroyed by a combined earthquake and water burst, either from clouds or the mountain. The new capital stands on an isolated hill, which it was thought would be a site least likely to be shaken. But the whole country bears evidence of what earthquakes have done to it. It is not a rare object to see a high mountain with half of it blown right off. In various communities they tell of having to clear streets of dust that falls to a depth of several feet after a volcanic explosion.

THE $13,000,000 SALVATION ARMY POSTER

A MAN MAY BE DOWN BUT HE'S NEVER OUT!

HOME SERVICE FUND CAMPAIGN

SALVATION ARMY MAY 19-26 1919

"A man may be down, but he's never out," the Salvation Army slogan, furnished the theme for the official Home Service Fund Campaign poster designed by Frederick Duncan, the noted artist. From this he has evolved a striking artistic creation, typifying the hand of the Salvation Army reaching out to rescue those who are enshrouded in the clouds of poverty and vice. A Salvation Army lass is the principal figure, and the scarlet lining of her cloak, thrown back as she enfolds those who are calling out to her in distress, furnishes the poster with its one spot of brilliant color. The background is of blacks, grays and greens, indicative of the storm clouds of misery and want.

Should Cities Have Slum Districts?

Jacob Riis, the noted author and sociologist, has sounded a timely warning to growing cities that have not experienced the troubles connected with large slum districts.

Dr. Riis said, "Most of our American cities are destined manufacturing centers. Most of our cities lie within reach of raw materials waiting to be made up into necessities and luxuries---with the coming of manufacturing plants the tenements and cheaply constructed apartment houses are invariably the homes of the workers. We have always tried to force our workers to live huddled and packed together; for what reason no man has ever been able to give a sane answer."

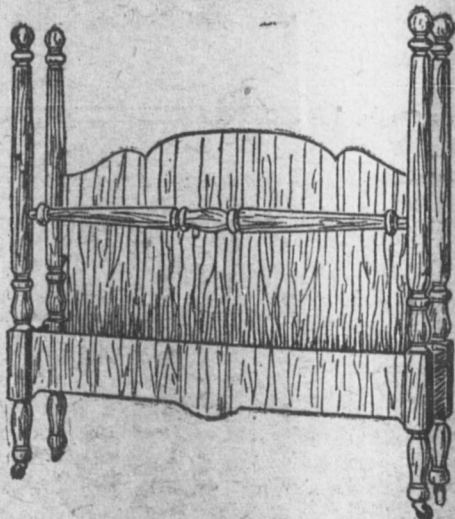

Continuing, Dr. Riis says, "Hell Kitchen, Tin Can Alleys and Poverty Rows are always found contiguous to large manufacturing establishments."

We have seen the ravaging effects of these crowded sections. We know that the slums and tenements go hand in hand with crime and vice, and sooner or later these parasites will undermine the communities, causing untold misery, adding expense to the police department of our Government.

If there is no good reason for slum districts, why have them? If they cause crime, disease and pestilence, why tolerate them? Why encourage our land owners to erect barn-like buildings, in which to herd and crowd our unfortunate citizens?

We must take the warning heralded by Dr. Riis and others, and profit by the mistakes of other cities. Our city has too much vacant space around it which should be peopled. We can offer no plausible excuse on the ground of lack of space; for on all sides is plenty of room for expansion. What we do need is the determination on the part of our land owners and builders not to permit tenements and slums, but provide comfortable homes where, nurtured by God's sunshine, we may develop men and women useful to us in every phase of citizenship.

In our more than twenty years business experience, we have never found it as difficult to keep our display complete and up to its standard as it is this season. Urging you to decide quickly once you are shown what you want is not merely a salesman's effort to complete a sale---he knows the almost certain disappointment you are courting as indicated by the above example---it is his duty to tell you of it. BUY NOW.

The reason for this condition is the unprecedented demand for high grade, dependable furnishings such as we feature exclusively. The people have money to spend, much of it, and they are buying the best merchandise obtainable. This has given specialty stores, like ours, a tremendous volume of business, a volume breaking all past records and causing a shortage of such goods.

HATE TO RETURN STOLEN COWS

Russian Prisoner of War Camp.
Chemnitz, Germany.
May 22, 1919.

Dear father:

By the time you receive this letter, I suppose the peace treaty will have been signed, and this letter will sound like ancient history. At the present writing, however, the peace treaty is still unsigned, and there is much discussion in Germany as to whether or not it will be signed.

The German press is adopting a conciliatory attitude toward the terms, and are even discussing what will happen if the conditions are accepted and actual peace comes.

The German people cannot realize what the civilized world thinks of them. They have been fed for so long a time on the lies of the Kaiser and the military caste, that they are of the opinion that the world will be unable to move along without their commercial help. They know now that they were defeated in the war, but they think the Allies will forgive and forget, and treat them as formerly in business dealings. Of course there is another awakening awaiting them along these lines. Their egotism, caused to some extent by the propaganda of the Kaiser, makes them think that the other nations, especially the United States, are inferior to Germany, especially in commerce. I was talking to a German bread manufacturer the other day—the subject of our conversation was America as a commercial power. I asked this man if he intended visiting America after the peace treaty was signed. In answer he said, "No I can learn nothing from you Americans, because all you know about business was learned from we Germans." One finds this spirit of egotism among all classes, they consider themselves above other nations, in a military way, in "kultur," and in a commercial way. Even yet you will meet Germans who will tell you that their armies were never defeated upon the field of battle, but simply had to retire because of the shortage of food and supplies.

The German press is just now venting its spite of President Wilson claiming that the terms of the peace treaty do not follow the lines of the famous 14 points. The chief bones of contention are:

1. The Saar Coal Fields.
2. The Territory in the East given to Poland.
3. The return of 140,000 milk cows to France and Belgium.

On the first point, the Saar coal fields, however, the press does not say a word about the wanton production of the French fields around Lens. It will take the French probably ten years to get this field into shape to rework it, as the Germans destroyed or stole the machinery, damaged the shafts, and flooded all the galleries. Before the war this field furnished France with about one fourth of its coal. The Saar coal. The Saar coal fields are therefore only a loan to France to replace the coal fields wrecked by the Huns.

On the question of the return of parts of West and East Prussia to the new republic of Poland, there is no doubt whatever of the justice of this grant. During the past two hundred years, Germany has robbed Poland of these territories and has made very attempt by propaganda, force and other means to Germanize them. German immigrants were sent into the country to take up the land and were given every preference over the Poles, the original owners and inhabitants of the land. In 1905, the Kaiser built a magnificent palace at Posen, stating that it would be a monument to cement the friendship between the Germans and the Poles.

In spite of these attempts to Germanize them, the Poles have retained their nationality and their language, and in justice to them, their years of servitude, and their devotion to an ideal that their territory should be returned to them. The new republic of Poland under the protection of the League of Nations will also act as a buffer state between Russia and Germany.

In regard to the last question, the return of one hundred and forty thousand milk cows to France and Belgium, the Berlin "Lokal Anzeiger" thinks the surrender of live stock, and especially the one hundred and forty thousand milk cows to the Entente is one of the most severe conditions of the peace, and asserts that the present situation as regards live stock is so menacing that the further reduction demanded would be a catastrophe to the health of the nation, especially the small children. However, none of the papers say a word about the poor French and Belgium babies who were starved on account of the theft of this number of cows from France and Belgium. There is only one viewpoint to the Germans, and that is the German side.

The German government at present is a socialist government, and are making a great cry that all the socialists of the world should rise against the peace, which they denounce as a capitalist made peace. The German Independent Socialists advocate the signing of the peace treaty as the lesser of two evils. They hint that a universal Bolshevik revolution will sweep away all existing States, and their treaties with them.

Below I am giving you a translation of an address made by the President Ebert to the German people the day after the publication of the peace terms:

"The honorable desire for peace of our greatly suffering people found its answer in the uncommonly severe armistice conditions. The German people laid down their arms and fulfilled all the terms of the armistice, as sharp as they were. In spite of this, our enemies continued the war for six months by maintaining the hunger blockade. The German people bore all burdens having faith in the Allies' note of November 15th, which promised that the peace would be a peace of justice based on the 14 points of Wilson. What is given to us now instead of the peace terms, contradicts the note, and is unbearable by the German people, and impossible of fulfillment, even by summoning all our forces.

Immeasurable power and borders are wrenched from the German people. From such an enforced peace new hate must spring up among nations and in course of time new murders. Parcelling out and chopping out the German people, giving over of German labor to foreign capital in an inhuman form of bondage, permanent republic by imperialism of the republic by the imperialism of the Entente is the aim of the forced peace. The German government will answer the proposition of a peace of slavery with a proposal that it should have been a peace of justice on the basis of its right to have a lasting peace for its people. The profound agitation that has gripped all German people, stands witness to the fact, that the German government expresses the firm will of the German people. The German Government will strain its every energy to get for the German people the same national unity and independence and the same freedom for labor in industry and Kultur, that the Allies want to give to all peoples of Europe, but not to our people.

Our people must save themselves by their own initiative. In view of this danger of our annihilation the German people must stand by its government, elected by the people, and without party differences Germany should unite in unanimous will to protect the German people and the freedom won. Every thought should be that the united will of the nation should apply to the preservation and rebuilding of the Fatherland.

The government appeals to all people to bide with it in this difficult hour and place confidence in it, attentive to duty and in faith with the triumph of reason and right.

The President, EBERT."

On the 12th of May, Ministerial President Scheidemann addressing the National Assembly made quite an appeal to the German people against the acceptance of the peace terms. His attack took the form mainly of a pronouncement against the taking from Germany of her territory, Alsace-Lorraine, the Saar District, the colonies, and Poland. He denounced President Wilson and held him false for promising a peace based on the famous 14 points, then failing to keep the promise. (This always on grounds that Germany's borders are restricted.) There were dramatic moments when all rose in indication of approval. One of these when Scheidemann declared: "We must stand together; we are of one flesh, one blood, and he who seeks to break us asunder, cuts with his murderous knife into the living flesh of the German people." Again he stated to his impressed audience: "We have submitted counter-propositions. We will make more of them. We believe that with them we may come to an understanding. This treaty is in the opinion of the government unacceptable, so unacceptable that I scarcely believe that the world could bear it, but instead, out of the millions upon millions of throats of all nations without consideration of party, all would cry aloud, down with this proposal of murder.

In Berlin, there have been many demonstrations against the acceptance of the peace terms. One of the most belligerent inclined, according to the press, was a meeting under the auspices of the German officers non-commissioned officers and enlisted men's Union at Circus Busch. This meeting was addressed by Major and Baron V. Reibnitz, who stated, "Ten million volunteers before we allow our children to starve to death." His son, a first lieutenant, then spoke to the effect that the beginning of a new war would cost a million more lives, but that it would be better to die like men if in doing so the children were avenged, and while doing this a couple of million of the enemy would be killed. "Erzberger, the fool," he said, "has given away all our arms to a Jew Government" he added bitterly. Count von Bernstorff was chairman of the meeting.

In Berlin there have been several demonstrations against Allied officers on duty at Hotel Adlon. One of the most serious is described below; the extract is from the Berlin "Vowarts" of May 14:

"Shortly after 6 o'clock a throng of demonstrators, mostly of Charlottenburg, surged through the Brandenburg Gate bent on going to Wilhelmstrasse. Before the Adlon Hotel there suddenly appeared two gentlemen whose dress and appearance seemed to indicate they belonged to the prosperous gentry, and they began to make inciting speeches in Pan-Germanic manner. Suddenly one of these, a gentleman with a beard streaked with grey, pressed himself forward. He urged the crowds with all his powers to press into the Aldon and bring out the representatives of the Entente living there and beat them up. A small part of the crowd made as though it would carry out this suggestion, but more orderly people and sober elements arriving in haste were able to quiet the crowd again. Nevertheless the two inciters continued their efforts with all means while everyone called out 'rascals' and 'scoundrels.' The guard at the Brandenburg Gate were alarmed, and arriving in haste, pressed the crowd back, and prevented their entering the hotel. The two inciters remained almost an hour on the spot and attempted again and again to have the ever increasing crowd break loose. The main speaker, the man with the beard, declared quite frequently that he was a Pan-German and represented himself moreover as a property owner out of the Province of Posen, which may be true, for he had the appearance of an agrarian from the east of the Elbe. In a most fortunate manner the soberness of a majority of the public prevented more serious happenings, so that finally the incident sluffed off into a harmless issue. Nevertheless, such a law-breaking occurrence inspired by these Pan-German elements cannot be too sharply scored, because it can have serious effect on our already tired people. We appeal to the Berlin people to give over to the police such fellows who storm out in excess against foreigners so that the police can properly penalize them."

With all their demonstrations and cries of "We won't sign," I think with General Maurice when he says "The Germans will bluff awhile, whine awhile, and then sign."

With the warmest of personal regards to all my friends, and with love to you, I am, Your affectionate son, HERSCHEL A. LONG.

Praise For Daniels.

Josephus Daniels continues to show that as a level-headed Democrat he can improve the navy service in little and big things as no secretary ever did before. Now he has ordered that epaulets, cocked hats, gold covered belts and highly ornamental special full dress coats, heretofore worn by naval officers on special occasions, shall be abolished. The discarding of so many articles of uniform will result in economy of space on board ship, ease in traveling and a great financial saving to officers, the secretary said. Those officers whose very life is strutting like turkey gobblers will deeply resent this, as they have other sensible orders of Secretary Daniels, but the plain sensible men among them will heartily approve it.—Owensboro Messenger.

Don't Go Near The Water.

This is a good time of the year to keep the small boy away from the Ohio river, or if he must go see that he is accompanied by a grown man who is a good swimmer. The time will come when the city will patrol the water front during the summer months, for the benefit of bathers, with life-savers.—Owensboro Messenger.

One of the disadvantages of deep water is that people sometimes get drowned in it.

Opportunity to Be Seized.

A porter in London was engaged in cleaning a luggage van, when the door swung back, striking him violently on the head. "Oh! Pat," he exclaimed to an Irishman standing on the platform, "I believe I've cut open my head." "Well, begor, now's the time to get something into it," was Pat's witty reply.

Grecian Building Materials.

Brick is the most common kind of building material in Saloniki and in all New Greece. Wooden structures are rare, on account of the shortage of timber. Stone is little used, except for underground walls and foundations. Ordinary walls are built with both plain and hollow bricks. The former, being more solid, are generally used for the building of lower stories, while hollow bricks are commonly employed in the upper stages. The principal kind of roofing used is made of lat tiling.

Advice Soldiers Need Not Take.

Sergeant, the French for which is sergeant, the Italian sergente, comes from the medieval Latin word serviens, meaning a servant, a vassal, or a vassal soldier who seems to have acted as an orderly or striker. Tell this to your sergeant some warm day when he criticises your appearance or parade in his coarse, unfeeling manner. It will soften him. It may even melt him.—New York Evening Post.

Gray Copper.

The work of a Swiss investigator suggests that absolutely pure copper may have a light-gray color like that of most other metals, since it is found that copper which has been ten times distilled in vacuo has only a pale rose color, while the yellow color of gold becomes much lighter under similar treatment.

Brazil Now Coffee Center.

Arabia formerly supplied the world with coffee; later the West Indies and then Java took the lead, to be supplanted in turn by Brazil, which now produces about three-quarters of the world's supply and controls the market.

Most Valuable Garnets.

The oriental garnets are the most valuable and beautiful. They come principally from Pegu; and the town of Sirian having formerly been the chief mart for them, they are hence by corruption known among lapidaries by the appellation of Sirian-garnets. They appear to be the carbuncle of the ancients; their color is crimson, verging into a very red violet; they are transparent, and have a conchoidal fracture.

CONSTIPATION

And Sour Stomach Caused This Lady Much Suffering. Black-Draught Relieved.

Meadorsville, Ky.—Mrs. Pearl Patrick, of this place, writes: "I was very constipated. I had sour stomach and was so uncomfortable. I went to the doctor. He gave me some pills. They weakened me and seemed to tear up my digestion. They would gripe me and afterwards it seemed I was more constipated than before."

I heard of Black-Draught and decided to try it. I found it just what I needed. It was an easy laxative, and not bad to swallow. My digestion soon improved. I got well of the sour stomach, my bowels soon seemed normal, no more griping, and I would take a dose now and then, and was in good shape.

I cannot say too much for Black-Draught for it is the finest laxative one can use."

Theodore's Black-Draught has for many years been found of great value in the treatment of stomach, liver and bowel troubles. Easy to take, gentle and reliable in its action, leaving no bad after-effects, it has won the praise of thousands of people who have used it.

I heard of Black-Draught and decided to try it. I found it just what I needed. It was an easy laxative, and not bad to swallow. My digestion soon improved. I got well of the sour stomach, my bowels soon seemed normal, no more griping, and I would take a dose now and then, and was in good shape.

I cannot say too much for Black-Draught for it is the finest laxative we can use."

Theodore's Black-Draught has for many years been found of great value in the treatment of stomach, liver and bowel troubles. Easy to take, gentle and reliable in its action, leaving no bad after-effects, it has won the praise of thousands of people who have used it.

THRIFT SUNDAY

Thrift Sunday is to be observed throughout the country on June 22. On this date every minister in Kentucky will be asked to deliver their Sunday sermon on Thrift and to read the message of Secretary of Treasury Glass to their people on War Savings and Thrift.

The project has been launched by the Savings Division, War Loan Organization of the Treasury Department which has started a nation-wide movement to conserve the war taught habits of thrift which has met with the hearty approval from many interests and organizations.

Every man, woman and child in the United States will be asked to consider and discuss the Thrift Sunday the present necessity for economy and its permanent value to personal community and national prosperity.

"Thrift and savings are the highways to freedom" says State Director James B. Brown. "That safe and profitable investment may be within reach of everyone the Treasury Department is continuing the sale of thrift and War Savings Stamps. The latter costing a little over four per cent. compounded quarterly is one of the very best rates for savings," declares Mr. Brown.

"War Savings Stamps are made easy to acquire. Thrift stamps cost but a quarter each and sixteen of these plus a few cents additional may be exchanged for an interest bearing War Savings Stamp.

The slogan of the Savings Department is "Save First—Spend Afterwards." "We hope to have every minister in Kentucky preach on Thrift on June 22d on the meaning and the value of intelligent thrift to his congregation and suggest plans for community and individual thrift in addition to encouraging church organizations to enroll as government savings societies" said the State Director.

When real service for the upbuilding and betterment of the nation and community is needed we naturally look to the churches of the country for their loyal assistance and cooperation. During the war they held true to their faith and justified the confidence that all those in authority placed in them as being instruments upon which they could rely for the cooperation and assistance in all the activity of the government necessary to the successful prosecution of a just and righteous war.

The peace-time needs of the nation and the community are as great and should be inspiring to the churches, as are the war-time needs. Many of the things that we do under the pressure of war are equally necessary and valuable in times of peace, but it sometimes happens that it needs the shock and force of a war to bring these things to our attention.

In no case is this more true than in that of saving and thrift. Under the strain and menace of war we were obliged to practice thrift and economy. We did it for the sake of the country without thought of personal gain or personal interest. In this the churches stood solidly behind the government and rendered untold assistance. While helping the government meet its needs we are learning much that we should know and practice during the following period of readjustment and peace-time development following the happy conclusion of the war.

The treasury department pledges its full aid in making the habits of real thrift, thoughtful and intelligent use of money, and saving for a real worthy cause, part of the national habits and activities of the American people. With idea of promoting this habit among the people and affording them an opportunity to invest their savings safely and carefully and at the same time, by so investing them, to obtain an increased participation in the government and take a more intelligent interest in our government and its activities, the Treasury Department is continuing the Savings campaign, and the sale of Savings and Thrift Stamps. We hope that we can rely on the pastors and members of all the churches of this country to support the government in the activity which will mean better citizens, better communities, and a better country.

Historic Island.

Blennerhassett's Island is a small island in the Ohio river about two miles below Parkersburg, W. Va., which figures in history. It gets its name from having been once owned by Hiram Blennerhassett, a wealthy Englishman, who built a fine residence on it. While living there he became financially involved in Aaron Burr's visionary and treasonable schemes, and they proved his ruin.

Source of Republic's Strength.

Government in a well-constituted republic requires no belief from man beyond what his reason authorizes. He sees the rationale of the whole system, its origin and its operations, and, as it is best supported when best understood, the human faculties act with boldness and acquire, under this form of government, a gigantic manliness.—Thomas Paine.

Teaching Canaries to Sing Tune.

Canaries may be taught to sing a tune, such as, "A Life on the Ocean Wave," by repeatedly singing to them in falsetto, or even to speak a few words. Once in a while (though rarely) a female canary turns out a fine singer.

Washing Poor People's Feet.

The custom of washing the feet of the poor on Maundy Thursday at Whitehall was observed by English sovereigns until the end of the seventeenth century. After that the ceremony was performed on their behalf by the Archbishops of York until the middle of the eighteenth century.

What He Didn't Like About Helen.

Kenneth's little playmate, Helen, was to have a party. Only girls were to be invited, but Kenneth was unaware of this fact. He longed for an invitation and expected one up to the day of the party. But alas! the invitation didn't come. Downhearted, he said to his mother: "You know, mother, I like Helen awfully well, but I certainly don't like her ways."

Just What He Had Done.

Charlie, trying to amuse himself as best he could, came out of the garage dragging an old cobwebby umbrella, which after much exertion he was able to open over his head. His grandmother, coming to the door, called out, "Charlie, you put that umbrella right up this minute." Charlie piped back, "I has dot it up and I see doin' for a walk."

To Conserve Firewood.

In burning wood in a furnace built for coal the firebox should first be lined with firebrick or sheet iron, so as to check the draft. Otherwise, the wood will burn too rapidly.

District Residents Disfranchised.

Residents of the district of Columbia never had the right to vote therein for national officials, which would include the president, or on other matters of national concern, after the territory embraced in the district was ceded to the United States and became the seat of the general government.

County Historian.

Any additions or further promotions of any of these men will be gladly recorded. It was hoped that enough full records would be sent in to give an outline of each officer's service in the month. Please secure the blank records and fill them out. They can be obtained at the Public Library and it is a small service to render these men to make and keep their permanent record. They gave months and years of the best part of their lives to defend our freedom and security.

MRS. W. T. FOWLER,
County Historian.

The Croix de Guerre has been awarded to Captain Ernest F. Moseley of this county. The ceremony of presentation took place April 7th, 1919 and was made by Gen. John A. Leicune, with the words, "Moseley, we are proud of you. I want to congratulate you."

The official notification from the government has not reached his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Moseley of Lafayette, so it is not known for just what service he was decorated. He was gassed slightly twice between the 5th and 7th of July, 1918, and during the last days of October was in command of some trucks which, with his auto were blown up, he escaping uninjured. It is supposed that the honor was given him for conduct on one or the other of these occasions.

Captain Moseley had an enviable record in the army. He volunteered at the age of 19 at Jefferson Barracks, Mo. October 1913, and was in the expedition to Vera Cruz and stationed in Galveston during the terrible hurricane, and served on the Mexican border from April 28 to Nov. 23, 1914. He sailed for France with the Second Division on January 8, 1918. He was then a Sergeant, and has since won his other promotions, the last being the Captaincy of Co. A., Q. M. C. 2nd. Supply Train, on the 13th of April, 1919. He has sent home a number of valuable souvenirs of his service in France. He is now stationed with the Army of Occupation in Neuwied, Germany.

Kentucky Boys Wearing Medals.

A large number of boys in Kentucky are proudly wearing the Bronze Service Medal given to them by the U. S. Boys' Working Reserve, a branch of the Department of Labor. This medal is given to every boy enrolled in the Reserve in recognition of 36 days' faithful service on the farm helping to raise food to feed the starving people of Europe. When the Reserve Boy completes 55 days of service he receives a medal larger in size and for 75 days work he receives the Honorable Service Bar.

All boys in Kentucky from 16 to 21 years are eligible to enroll in the reserve for farm labor. Boys who live and work on the farms are as welcome as the boys in cities and towns who go to the farms. A large number of farm boys in Kentucky are already enrolled and many are going out to the farms from the cities and towns for vacation work on the farms.

Acting upon the request of the Department of Labor at Washington, the enrollment of boys in the Reserve will continue until the late harvest in order that the nation's record crops may be fully gathered.

Any boy desiring to know more about how these medals may be won can write George E. Stevens, Executive State Director, 345 Y. M. C. A. building, Louisville, Ky.

BEN. FRANKLIN'S PHILOSOPHY

Revolutionary Patriot Gave Advice On Thrift That Has Survived the Ages.

Listen to the message of Benjamin Franklin. It should be a good one. He rose from errand boy in his father's candle shop to be one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and minister plenipotentiary from the United States to France.

"Remember that time is money," said the patriotic philosopher. "He that can earn ten shillings a day by his labor, and sits idle one-half that day, though he spends some sixpence during his idleness, he has really spent or thrown away five shillings besides."

"Remember, that money is of the prolific, generating nature. Money can beget money, and its offspring can beget more. He that murders a crown destroys all that it might have produced, even scores of pounds."

"The way to wealth is as short as the way to market. It depends chiefly on two words, industry and frugality; that is, waste neither time nor money, but make the best use of both."

Franklin's picture is on the 1919 War Savings Stamps. They give over 4 per cent. interest. Time and money spent wisely means something over for War Savings Stamps.

LOST 15 OF 36

CHILDREN IN WAR

French Farmer Himself Was Shot And Three Other Sons Were Wounded.

Paris, June 2.—Thirteen sons killed on the field of battle, three discharged with grave injuries, one wounded four different times, the father and one daughter summarily shot by the Germans for going to Lille to celebrate the centennial anniversary of a relative and another daughter killed by a German shell at Dunkirk, is the record of the family of M. Vanhee, a French farmer of Reminghe, near Ypres.

M. Vanhee had thirty-six children, twenty-two sons and fourteen daughters, all of whom were living when the war broke out.

One of his sons was valet to Pope Pius X. He returned to France to fight and was wounded in each of four different engagements. One of the sons lost both legs, another returned from the front blind and deaf and another underwent the trepanning operation.

MRS. W. T. FOWLER, County Historian.

Any additions or further promotions of any of these men will be gladly recorded. It was hoped that enough full records would be sent in to give an outline of each officer's service in the month. Please secure the blank records and fill them out. They can be obtained at the Public Library and it is a small service to render these men to make and keep their permanent record. They gave months and years of the best part of their lives to defend our freedom and security.

MRS. W. T. FOWLER, County Historian.

The Croix de Guerre has been awarded to Captain Ernest F. McDaniel of this county. The ceremony of presentation took place April 7th, 1919 and was made by Gen. John A. Leleune, with the words, "Moseley, we are proud of you. I want to congratulate you."

The official notification from the government has not reached his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Moseley of Lafayette, so it is not known for just what service he was decorated. He was gassed slightly twice between the 5th and 7th of July, 1918, and during the last days of October was in command of some trucks which, with his auto were blown up, he escaping uninjured. It is supposed that the honor was given him for conduct on one or the other of these occasions.

Captain Moseley had an enviable record in the army. He volunteered at the age of 19 at Jefferson Barracks, Mo. October 1913, and was in the expedition to Vera Cruz and stationed in Galveston during the terrible hurricane, and served on the Mexican border from April 28 to Nov. 23, 1914. He sailed for France with the Second Division on January 8, 1918. He was then a Sergeant, and has since won his other promotions, the last being the Captaincy of Co. A., Q. M. C. 2nd. Supply Train, on the 13th of April, 1919. He has sent home a number of valuable souvenirs of his service in France. He is now stationed with the Army of Occupation in Neuwied, Germany.
